He Done Her Wrong

The Redemptive Value of Reframing Violence against Women in Story

Saturday, November 2nd · 3 - 5 p.m. | Neil Morgan Auditorium

A novelist, a memoirist, a playwright and an immigration lawyer discuss the ways in which their work reframes instances of violence against women, and ultimately empowers survivors of sexual trauma and abuse. This moderated discussion provides a clear eyed perspective on a problem that harms women of all classes and ethnicities, and offers a rare opportunity for members of the community to address the issue in a safe space.
